Dear Ms. Wood:

Enclosed is my essay "Love of a Red Rose." In writing this essay, I explained how important the red rose was when Steve gave it to me, and how the love from one single rose changed my life. I show all the doubts and what the true meaning of love is. To this day that rose still reminds me about my journey, and how much love this man has given to me and continues to.

Overall, I was pleased with my essay. I believe the narrative in this essay will be easy to read and feel. I believe I put a lot of description and have developed a feeling for all my moments. I take great pleasure presenting you this essay.

On the other hand, I worried about whether I should put more description in my struggles and what I went through during Steve's deployment. I believe if I did put more description, it would have taken away from the meaning of the rose, but am interested to see what you think. Also, I'm concerned about comma rules, but I plan on studying them and would appreciate any input from you.

Hope you enjoy the essay and happy reading.

Sincerely,

Laureen L. Vilchek
